

Aaron Weiner, PhD

Specialized therapy for addiction.

Experience you can trust. On your terms.

I understand what you're going through.

My years of experience as a therapist, administrator, and director for addiction treatment programs have taught me that once you decide to make a change, the first steps forward are critical. It takes tremendous courage to head down this uncertain path, unsure of the outcome and unsure of yourself. You need to be able to trust the guidance you receive—you need someone who understands the way forward and who can help you overcome the obstacles ahead. I have dedicated my career to supporting those making this journey.

I'm here to make your experience successful.

You are putting your trust in this process, and the process needs to work for you. In the weeks and months ahead, you will have to make choices and changes that can feel jarring, unsettling, and uncomfortable. You cannot feel alone when you need guidance the most. I am here to provide you with the support you need, when you need it, available even when we're not in a session together.

I prioritize you.

Working from a "concierge" model, I serve a limited number of clients, so I can customize therapy to individual needs. I never schedule back-to-back sessions. You get to decide how many sessions you have, and how long they last. In between sessions, we communicate using HIPAA-compliant text, video chat, and email—whatever works best for you and your recovery experience.

I am a licensed, board-certified psychologist and master addiction counselor, as well as a clinician, author, and frequent speaker on addiction treatment and issues.

Doctorate in Counseling Psychology

University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Board Certified in Counseling Psychology

American Board of Professional Psychology (ABPP)

Master Addiction Counselor (MAC)

National Association of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Counselors

Visit weinerphd.com to learn more about my background, my approach to therapy, and my commitment to making sure you have the support you need, for as long as you need, every step of the way.

847 786 8725 | aaron@weinerphd.com